HEAVY FINES FOR SOCIALISTS

Although They Are Singularly Law Abiding, They Were Found Guilty

(Mail Correspondence.) Hancock, Mich., Aug. 9.—Arraigned for the offense of carrying red flags through the streets during a parade, thirteen Socialists were found guilty of anarchy and attempts to riot after the jury had deliberated five minutes.

The men had been arrested a week ago last Sunday and the trial lasted two days. Two of the men were charged with carrying the red flag of anarchy, while eleven were charged with creating a disturbance and inciting a riot. The jury's decision came in spite of the fact that the innocence of the accused of any evil action had been conclusively established, and after it had been shown that the rioting and disturbances were entirely the work of policemen and bystanders.

It was proven that the red flag is not a symbol of anarchy, but the regular official emblem of Socialists the world over. In this instance the Socialists had carried two red flags together with the American flag and sashes which bore the words of "temperance" and "order." The Socialists of Hancock are particularly a temperate class of people and as much advocates of war on liquor and lawlessness as they are fighters against corporate greed.

Leo Laski, one of the witnesses for the defense, stated that he was an editor and spoke several languages and was conversant with the customs and beliefs of Socialists all over the world. He stated that in all countries except Russia the flag of anarchy is black; that in Russia it is red and black, and that in every country the flag of Socialism is red.

Other witnesses stated that during the parade in question a disturbance was caused by attempts on the part of hoodlums to attack the paraders and steal their flags.

After the jury returned its verdict Justice Oliver immediately declared a fine of $50 and costs for the two men who carried red flags, and $15 and costs for the eleven accused of rioting. A petition of appeal for a new trial was at once filed by the defense and the hearing thereon will be held at the next term of circuit court at Houghton.

ITALIANS KIDNAP A CHILD

(By United Press Associations.) New York, Aug. 9.—Italian detectives are turning New York's Latin quarter topsy turvy in their efforts to find the blackmailer and kidnapers they believe are holding Rocco Valardi's 5-year-old daughter Dominica for ransom. Coming in connection with the epidemic of assaults on women and children and the panic caused by the warfare between the police and an organized band of Armenian extortionists and assassins, the latest renewal of "Black Hand" activity has driven the detective department fairly distracted. Valardi is a man of some wealth and a leader in the local Italian colony.

Denver Ripped Out a Roaring Welcome to Big "Bill" Haywood

room she cast a loving glance at him and said: "Don't Bill; you are too tired. We will rest a while." "Tired! Why, this is easy," laughed her husband, as he started with his burden. "Don't leave me, Bill," she cried when he placed her on the bed. "Indeed I'll not, until you are taken care of," was the reply.

Arrangements were made by the hotel management to take him to the first floor balcony, but Haywood wished to be among the crowd and decided to speak from the balcony. With a parting kiss for his wife he left the room. A large American flag had been spread on banners from the main entrance of the hotel to the curb, and under this he passed.

Cries of "Hurrah for Bill!" and "Welcome home!" were heard on all sides as his voice rose clear and loud. The cheers for a minute or more were deafening. He took off his hat and after the cries of welcome had died out he said: "Ladies and gentlemen, fellow unionists, brothers and sisters: This is the happiest moment of my life."

He was interrupted by a tremendous cheer, followed by cries of "Good, Bill, good." When the crowd quieted down he went on: "But my cup of happiness would be complete if..." He hesitated a moment as he looked over the heads of the people, then continued: "If Charles Meyer were sitting here on my right and George Pettibone on my left."

"If twere possible, the cheer that followed this self-forgetful remark was even greater than the one that came after his opening words. "I am glad to get back among my friends," Haywood continued. "A year ago, when I was kidnaped, some of my friends told me I would never leave Idaho alive. But I am here, and I did not come back in a box, as they told me I would."

More shouts and cries of "You're right, Bill," greeted this remark. "McPartland Hissed. "McPartland Hissed and groans out him short. Finally there was silence again and Haywood, laughing, said: "I anticipated that."

"Unionists no longer today than it ever was," he continued, bringing down his right arm to his knee. Applause followed. "It has been growing by leaps and bounds within the last year. All that the workmen ask is what they produce. Give us what we produce and the mine owners and manufacturers can have the rest. On behalf of my wife and children, my mother, the Western Federation, my dearest friends and myself, I thank you for your loyal friendship and support. On account of my wife, who needs me by her side, I can't talk to you any longer. I want to get around and take every one of you by the hand."

ederation had voted me a vacation. But I am back now for work. James Kirwan, who has done my work while I have been away for a year and a half, has made an excellent record, and he will remain for the present at headquarters because there is work enough for us both. I have received hundreds of congratulatory telegrams, and Kirwan tells me he has hundreds more awaiting my inspection.

"I am glad to get back to Colorado. It is my home, my work is here, and here I know how to carry it out as faithfully as I know how. When my wife and children came to Boise the home was temporarily broken up, and we will be together again in a few days, until we can get k-i-t-e-d again."

Continues a Socialist. "I will continue to be a Socialist." "Only on one subject did Haywood speak sarcastically. He declared: "The Pinkertons have been completely routed, and some of the members of the federation to serve their masters will now probably retire from our ranks. "With the exception of a few feature writers, the newspaper men at the Boise trial treated me fairly," declared the leader of the union miners. "And I was fortunate in that the federation secured the services of such able lawyers as Richard Darrow, Nugent, Murphy, Edgar Wilson, Brown, Miller and Whitely."

"Recently I've had ample opportunity to follow the news of the day and keep in touch with labor matters. It is my belief that the general labor situation in the country is improving all the time, especially as to the Western Federation of Miners. Gratifying concessions to our members have been made in many instances during the past eighteen months, both in hours and wages. In fact, there seems to have been a remarkable wave of betterment in all labor conditions, notably among the railroad men."

Noticeable, indeed, was the conduct of Haywood en route. He could not restrain himself every few minutes from going from the smoking room to the center of the car and ascertaining if his invalid wife or "Eight Hour" Murphy, the sick federation lawyer, needed his attention in any way. In the party beside the engineer sat the Yatic, mother and two daughters—were Murphy, his sister, Louise, Dr. Disbrow, Acting Secretary Kirwan of the federation, who met the party at Colorado Springs, John R. McMahon of Wilshire Magazine, New York, and Margherita Arlina Hamm, a noted New York special writer.

Mrs. Haywood Happy. Mrs. Haywood, the faithful wife of the mine leader, was fairly bubbling over with joy. She said: "Last Sunday, when Mr. Haywood wrote me, we had 250 cards and read 400 telegrams and the phone was ringing all day long. I knew the men would acquit my husband. They were intelligent and fair-minded. I'd like to have brought the whole jury home with us. I was at the courthouse every day except a few when it rained, and we would have luncheon on the courthouse grounds and Mrs. Dunnington, the wife of the San Francisco Examiner correspondent, would send over a pot of tea every day."

Mrs. John R. McMahon, better known by her nom de plume, Margherita Arlina Hamm, gave some interesting side lights on the Haywoods during their stay at Boise.

Studied Law. "Mr. Haywood" said she, "has been studying law during his twenty months imprisonment and has finished the course. His little library... the jail was an interesting indication of the class of man he is. He read such books as 'Draper's Intellectual History of Europe,' 'Haeckel's The Riddle,' 'Browning's Ring and the Book' and Hugo's and Tolstoy's novels, and Dostoyevsk's 'Poor Folk.' "He reads good deal, and one day he read 'Mary and Martha' so eloquent. I'd with such feeling that some of us who were calling at the jail had to leave the room. "Pettibone has taken up painting and he was doing that sketch of Gibson's describing the long journey, and it was this that inspired Mr. Haywood to re-

STARVING; KILL A RICH MAN

He Hoarded His Wheat; Asked Exorbitant Price; Punishment Is Terrible

At the headquarters of the Woman's Presbyterian board of missions in this city a letter was received today from Mrs. Loretta C. Van Hook, a Chicago missionary in Persia, whose life is believed to be in peril at Tabriz, where the Turks are making raids and killing Christians and snaking the villages.

Two weeks ago a man was beaten so that he died from the effects of his punishment. A couple of days later the people arose and demanded that a rich merchant who had a large quantity of wheat stored should sell on the market to save the starving, as he had promised to do. He refused unless an exorbitant price were paid.

"The people revolted. A mob was formed and the merchant's house was stormed. He was dragged from his home. He offered the starving mob 2,000,000 pounds of wheat if it would release him to Jaka.

"The man shouted that it was too late. They dragged him through the streets, beating him with stones and stabbing him as he was pulled over the ground. While still alive they cut off his ears and nose and hung his body upon a post in the streets. His family had to pay 1,000,000 pounds of wheat to recover his body.

A plot to assassinate leading members of the council was discovered and one man was killed in his home and two were hanged yesterday. The local officers appear to be revolting against the shah and have taken possession of the post and telegraph offices and customs house. They expect to attempt to attack the arsenal tomorrow.

No word has been received from Mrs. Van Hook since the letter arrived.

LIVE WIRE ROSE UP; TORE OFF HER CLOTHES

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 9.—Mrs. Maude S. Orr clander, that she was disrobed by a live wire, or so near to it that it is not worth while speaking of the re-incident, so that she was left in the Georgia railroad. She was walking across a prominent street on a shopping tour when the loose end of a guy wire, filled with juice, leaped for her belt, tore it from her slender waist, and ripped off a few shavings of high class dressmaking, and left her an object of pity and humiliation. The wire was not even rebuked.

GOVERNMENT WILL TEST ALL FOODS AND DRINK

The pure food department of the United States government is preparing to inaugurate a campaign against impure drugs, foods and liquors in Chicago. A great laboratory is being fitted out in the top of the Manhattan building, where everything of a suspicious nature will be tested and labeled in order to ascertain whether it is fit for the public.

AN EX-ALDERMAN RUNS DOWN 13-YEAR-OLD GIRL

A "remarkable" automobile accident occurred last night in West Jackson boulevard.

Remarkable from the fact that the occupants of the machine, which was being driven along the thoroughfare at a terrific rate of speed, escaped from the police station unharmed.

Mary Quigley, a telephone girl, 1302 Wilcox avenue, 13 years of age, which, by the way, is an illegal age for girls in that kind of work, was riding on her bicycle, accompanied by a girl friend, Sadie Walsh.

Suddenly a heavy touring car containing ex-Alderman Nathan T. Brenner, a wealthy manufacturer, his wife and son, Norman, who was driving the machine, bore down on the little girl.

The Quigley girl was thrown to the pavement and the wheels of the heavy machine passed over her, injuring her skull and spine.

Policeman Michael Callahan, who witnessed the accident, stopped the automobile, and after caring for the injured girl arrested the Brenners and took them to the Warren avenue police station.

Here it was where the "remarkable" escape occurred. Brenner's family explained to the desk sergeant that the accident occurred from a collision between the little girl and a strange boy who was riding a wheel. The boy, the sergeant said, was riding on the girl's wheel and socked her to the pavement and then the auto came along and ran over her.

The policeman who witnessed the entire affair, said there was no boy in sight. But a policeman, whose bread and butter can be taken away at the magic word of an alderman, or even an ex-alderman, was discredited.

After the finding of this board of judicial character it would be out of place for anyone to intimate that Frank Bennett, White City Snow and other great "business men" who are members of the finance committee of the city council, are grafters.

Of course they agreed to pay Jake Keaney for space in a court building that was not in the building at all, but the contract made by these business wonders could not be broken, so it must be paid to Jake.

The Latest Deal. Now the same finance committee is engineering another deal. It is buying a water works in Rogers Park, and, like the Keaney deal, the thing is marked by a lot of "carelessness."

When the fact that the city would pay $300,000 for a water plant that must be thrown away in three years was made public these big business statesmen began to explain and beg the water company to "do what is right."

Another blow was dealt large financial interests by a federal court ruling today when Judge Grosscup and Prof. Gray, sitting as arbitrators in the Union Traction litigation, squeezed the water out of the organizations and condemned the waters for "boasting" the stock in order to fleece credulous investors.

This puts the small stockholders out of the traction game.

SQUEEZED OUT SMALL U. T. STOCKHOLDERS

Another blow was dealt large financial interests by a federal court ruling today when Judge Grosscup and Prof. Gray, sitting as arbitrators in the Union Traction litigation, squeezed the water out of the organizations and condemned the waters for "boasting" the stock in order to fleece credulous investors.

REHABILITATION MEANS DEATH FOR UNWARY

A report that was made known by the board of supervising engineers in charge of the rebuilding of the street car lines sets forth that the clearance between cars on the rebuilt lines will be but eight and one-half inches. It follows that under this condition it will be death for a person to stand between two moving cars on the rehabilitated roads. There will be no exceptions made on the wider streets, such as State street, where a clearance of forty inches could be made, the engineers taking the stand that difference of alignment on different streets would amply be the public to be careless and the arrangement would be more deadly than the present one.

UNITED SOCIETIES ARE NOT IN "JINING" MOOD

The United Societies delivered a stinging blow to the Democratic party last night when in a meeting at the Sherman hotel they adopted a resolution declaring that they would not become affiliated in any way with the party, as had been rumored.

BRAND NEW SCHEME FOR WATERWORKS A WONDER

A few months ago a graft investigation committee reported that members of the city council were "careless, but not grafters." After the finding of this board of judicial character it would be out of place for anyone to intimate that Frank Bennett, White City Snow and other great "business men" who are members of the finance committee of the city council, are grafters.

Of course they agreed to pay Jake Keaney for space in a court building that was not in the building at all, but the contract made by these business wonders could not be broken, so it must be paid to Jake.

That Big Fine

The galleries are resounding with applause because the villain has struck a resounding blow with a slap stick.

The hero is proudly parading before the footlights, receiving the plaudits earned in his great act, "Fining the Octopus to Death!"

The trouble is that a great many people are taking the play seriously, and are apparently blind to its farcical character.

The applauding multitude are not exactly sure what they are applauding; the multitude seldom is. They do not seem to know just how the big fine is going to help them, but they think it is going to HURT ROCKEFELLER, and Rockefeller has been playing the part of the villain so long that every time he is hit the gallery applauds.

There are some things the fine will certainly not do. It will certainly not BUST STANDARD OIL. Not by some hundred million dollars. It will not even cause the passing of a dividend.

It will not reduce prices. Indeed, it is generally recognized that it is liable to have exactly the opposite effect.

IT WILL NOT HELP ANYBODY UNLESS IT IS A FEW OF THE OFFICE HOLDERS THAT WILL HANDLE THE EXPENDITURE OF THE MONEY.

The trust has often been compared to a great machine and the comparison is a true one.

At the present time all the various cogs that once made up a multitude of small businesses have been fitted, pounded, smashed and worked into one great central organization. As business goes on those cogs, groaning and grinding, are turning out products.

By the very process which beats them into form for the present great trust machine they have been rendered useless for independent operation.

It would be as impossible to disrupt the great Standard Oil Company into its constituent parts and start each one along the line of producing oil in an effective manner as it would be to take the great locomotive of today, tear it to pieces and use the wheels to construct wheelbarrows and stage coaches.

All that the little capitalist can do with this great machine that has ground up his fortune, destroyed his property, taken away his dividends, deprived him of the power of enjoying surplus value, is to insert a crowbar here, throw a crossbar in there, and thus hinder the working of the perfect machine.

The Socialist looks upon this machine as a magnificent instrument and says, "Let us take that machine and use it ourselves." That machine is now a public institution and should belong to and be used by all.

"Rockefeller, Morgan and Harriman are bringing about Socialism in this country," said Professor Charles Zeublin of the University of Chicago. Unconsciously the very forces that would soonest destroy the word Socialism are the one that are paving the way to that industrial change.

CAPITALISM IS ITS OWN GRAVE DIGGER. IT IS PREPARING ITS OWN END.

It was the Socialists who first pointed out that when the railroad and the steamship had compassed the world market that competition was universally doomed, and along with it capitalism. Not many years ago, when the Socialists pointed out that competition would end in concentration they were laughed at and the defenders of capitalism looked about them to find some way to explain that concentration was not universal and only affected certain industries. They thought to put a barrier to the advancing wave of the Socialist ocean and say, "Thus far can concentration go and no farther."

Today the Socialist position is a truism and the waves are sweeping over the Mrs. Parthingtons in the economic field.

Socialists take the trust as a stage in the progress toward Socialism. Who is there today who would return to the primitive wasteful methods of production of a century ago? Who would throw aside the modern spinning machine, the great steamship and the mogul engine and return to the spinning wheel, the slow-moving sailboat and the ox cart?

Concentration in the business world has done what the great complex machine has done for industry. It is a labor-saving device. That the people today have not reaped the benefit of this great labor-saving device is because private individuals own the trusts.

THE SOCIALISTS SAY, LET THE PEOPLE OWN THE TRUSTS.

Manage them yourselves, secure all the benefits from the more economical method of production that now go into the pockets of the Rockefeller, Morgans and Harrimans.

While Roosevelt is playing to the galleries in getting after the trusts and Hearst and Bryan are talking about busting the trusts and curbing it by legislation, the Socialists see in the advance of the concentration of wealth a sure indication of the inevitable change to Socialism.

A prominent corporation lawyer in conversation said: "There is not a man on Wall street that does not see that Socialism is inevitable. All they hope for is to stay its coming as long as possible."

THE TRUST IS HERE. IT IS HERE TO STAY. THE ONLY QUESTION BEFORE THE PEOPLE IS WHO SHALL OWN THE TRUSTS?

SOCIALISTS MAKE NO WAR ON THE CONCENTRATION OF WEALTH. THEY ONLY SAY, LET THE PEOPLE OWN AND MANAGE THE GREAT INDUSTRIES. THAT WOULD BE SOCIALISM.

ESPERANTO The International Language

Conducted by Arthur Baker, Editor of L'Americano Esperantisto, and Compiler of "The American Esperanto Book."

Several inquiries have been received regarding phonographic records of Esperanto. So far none have been prepared in this country, and as there are few of the capitalist class in the Esperanto movement it does not seem advisable to make them unless a sufficient demand is forthcoming to assure their cost. Let all the groups and individuals who desire records of this kind write to us stating what machine they have and about how many different records they would care to buy.

The Socialist Esperanto group of Zurich, Switzerland, is evidently a humor, as it holds four sessions every week. Doubtless many of the members would correspond. The address is: S. H. Strass, Zurich.

The labor unions of Eaden, Switzerland, sponsor an Esperanto course and have organized a class. The secretary is Robert Angst, Rosshaus, Eaden.

At the Swiss stenographic convention there was a competitive test in Esperanto stenography.

MY DREAM

I've fashioned a beautiful city— The city that's going to be— Where the men who create are the rulers. And the children are happy and free. Where the rich and the humble are equal— Where justice and honor prevail— Where the good and the true are encouraged. And none but the unworthy— And often, when tired and restless, My spirit seems weary of life, I wander afar to the city, forgetting the world and its strife. So continue to dwell, O ye people, In your primitive, old-fashioned way. My city is greater and happier Than the best ye can boast of to-day. And when the near future develops Conditions more equal and fair, Then millions shall live and be happy In this city that's run on the square. —John C. Wright.

A MID-SUMMER NIGHTMARE

AN IDYL IN ONE ACT

By Ellis O. Jones

Stage setting—A glade in the Rocky Mountains. On the right and left are several family trees which seem to have considerable difficulty in standing upright. In the background may be seen the tracks of the Union Pacific railroad. In the hollow of one of the trees, all of which are hollow, reclines Roosevelt, fully caparisoned as a cowboy. By his side is a freshly killed Teddybear, while another Teddybear may be seen prowling about in the moonlight. He sleeps, secure in the protection of Loeb, who hovers constantly near disguised as Cupid. The moon shines rather dimly, as if uncertain of Loeb's desires in the premises. Loeb (after peering cautiously in all directions and frowning at the moon, goes to his chief and, waving a wand back and forth above him, croons a lullaby):

Slumber, so sweetly, my idol, my chief, You're safe in this snugly, which I know has had best. No magnets or unions are hovering near. The reporters have gone to the village for beer. The last train is past and the next is not due. So sleep, sweetly sleep, while I watch over you.

As he finishes the Teddybears gather at the front of the stage. Chorus of Teddybears: The fashion we, so light and free; So say we all of us. Our fame has spread from sea to sea; So say, so say we all.

Oh, death, where is thy victory? So say we all of us. When we are killed by such as he? So say, so say we all.

Oh, never more we'll happy be; So say we all of us. Until we're killed by such as he; So say, so say we all.

A rumbling is heard without and the Teddybears scatter in terror. Loeb looks startled and covers his chief with cushions and covers. A Union Pacific train pulls in and stops. At the throttle is Harriman disguised as a tramp. The train is marked "Liars' Special." The passengers alight and come down stage. In the foreground are Taft, Foraker, Carnegie and W. H. Mallock. In the background are Liars, Molluscoides, Undesirable Citizens and Nature Fakers.

Carnegie (discovering Loeb)—Peace be with you, my chief. Loeb (officiously)—Have you an appointment with him? Carnegie—Peace be with you. No. Loeb—He is resting and cannot be disturbed. Harriman—That's just the point. We desire to disturb him. We have come to try him on a serious charge. Loeb (anxiously)—What is the charge? Harriman—We charge him with perjury. We have brought both Taft and Foraker as judges in order that the trial may be thoroughly impartial. As soon as they have done their stunt the trial will proceed.

Dust by Foraker and Taft: We're enemies sworn and swearing; Just look at us raving and tearing. We're on our way to the Buckeye state, We're on our way to break the other's pate. Chorus: For two may run while one may reach. Foraker—He is a lemon and I am a peach. Loeb—He is a lemon and I am a peach. Both—One is a lemon, the other's a peach— But which, but which, but which? We furnish good news for the papers By political news and capers. It's great to be in the public eye; We never resign, but sometimes die.

Chorus: Both—We both see plums within our reach; Taft—He is a lemon and I am a peach. Foraker—He is a lemon and I am a peach. Both—One is a lemon, the other's a peach— But which, but which, but which? They retire to a stump down left and sit. Carnegie (acting as court crier)—Peace be with you. The court is now in session. First witness. Mallock—If the court please, I realize that I have no business here and that I am merely butting in. But as butting in is my business, I prattle, hear my tale.

Mallock's song: I'm a foreign born joke of the period, I formulate words by the myriad, I make 'em at home and sell 'em abroad. On this side I'm great; on the other a fraud. Chorus: Please notice my style oratorical, And also my manner rhetorical, And, if it is not too weary, Just remember, my dear, That I'm nothing if not metaphorical. I've come to explain the complexity, Also the concave and convexity, Of your numerous intricate problems and quarrels;

The capitalist believes in the rule of the majority only when the majority can be easily fooled by the minority. The tree of American liberty is better known in these days by its parasite than by its fruit. Preach the gospel of gladness for things as they should be, not as they are. Be satisfied with the good only when it points to something better.

The Socialists don't blame Rockefeller—they blame every fellow. The capitalist objects to taking the Socialist pill, because he is afraid it will clean him out. The capitalist is never weary in well doing, for the simple reason that he can always hire someone to do it for him; therefore he may reap and faint not.

Under the present system a man's identity is made into a machine for the benefit of capitalism and identity becomes a nonentity. Thought never takes the place of toil, but it does enable some men to take the product of toil. Workingmen would do well to toil less and to think more.

The wise business man always remains in politics under cover because he knows there is always selling out to be done.

That is, so to speak, I am looking for laurels. Chorus: I'm the patronized saint of ability, Please notice my verbal agility. A penny-a-liner, A winner, a dicer, I love and adore the nobility. Carnegie—Peace be with you. I hope your spelling is simpler than your language. However, Mr. Mallock, let me ask you, have you settled everything on the other side? Mallock—No. There are still a few public questions left. Carnegie—Then go way back home and sit down. Next witness.

Chorus of Molluscoides: We are careless Molluscoides, And we love to sing and dance And to trip across the campus (Note the creases in our pants). Bless your garden, read it 'trousers,' Which is vastly more correct. For we may not be great hunters, But we must be circumspect. We are listless Molluscoides, And we love societies, And we only favor duels. Fought with waters and pink tea. We just hate track games and football. And we shun the tiring links, But we love pingpong immensely. Also, likewise, tiddledewinks. Herriman's song: In me you see a knight of the road, Bow down, bow down, A first class magnate, a la mode, Bow down, bow down, I say. There never was so great a man In Wall street, Africa or Japan; From coast to coast my railroad spans, Bow down, bow down, bow down.

I'm not afraid of the president, Bow down, bow down, On-undetrable citizens bent, Bow down, bow down, I say. Whenever a fight is made on me, I snap my fingers thus, you see, And gently murmur, "Twenty-three." Bow down, bow down, bow down. Chorus of undesirable citizens: We are the happy victims of a lately uttered preachment. Upon the testimony, we admit the soft impeachment, And, since we're undesirable and of but little worth, We work in mines in order that we may get off the earth. Chorus: For the worker must follow the job And the job must follow the flag, While the mighty hunter must follow the trail. And the head must follow the jag. Chorus of Liars: Dear Maria, you're a liar. So the story runs, Please retire under fire. So the story runs, I can't stand for your audacity, Coupled with unearned mendacity, I've a corner on veracity. So the story runs, singing you're a lie, you're a lie-O.

Mister Long, you're in the wrong. So the story runs, That is, you lie, to make it strong. So the story runs, Let me say it more explicitly, You're a fake of rank and duplicity, You can take my word implicitly. So the story runs, singing you're a lie, you're a lie-O. Carnegie—Peace be with you. That completes the witnesses, if the court please. What is the verdict? Foraker (announcing verdict)—The culprit is found guilty of Pernicious Activity and we sentence him to listen to the reading of his own messages. Roosevelt (awaking in time to hear the sentence)—They're lies (sings). (Curtain.)

MUTTERINGS OF A MILLIONAIRE

That is, so to speak, I am looking for laurels. Chorus: I'm the patronized saint of ability, Please notice my verbal agility. A penny-a-liner, A winner, a dicer, I love and adore the nobility. Carnegie—Peace be with you. I hope your spelling is simpler than your language. However, Mr. Mallock, let me ask you, have you settled everything on the other side? Mallock—No. There are still a few public questions left. Carnegie—Then go way back home and sit down. Next witness.

Chorus of Molluscoides: We are careless Molluscoides, And we love to sing and dance And to trip across the campus (Note the creases in our pants). Bless your garden, read it 'trousers,' Which is vastly more correct. For we may not be great hunters, But we must be circumspect. We are listless Molluscoides, And we love societies, And we only favor duels. Fought with waters and pink tea. We just hate track games and football. And we shun the tiring links, But we love pingpong immensely. Also, likewise, tiddledewinks. Herriman's song: In me you see a knight of the road, Bow down, bow down, A first class magnate, a la mode, Bow down, bow down, I say. There never was so great a man In Wall street, Africa or Japan; From coast to coast my railroad spans, Bow down, bow down, bow down.

I'm not afraid of the president, Bow down, bow down, On-undetrable citizens bent, Bow down, bow down, I say. Whenever a fight is made on me, I snap my fingers thus, you see, And gently murmur, "Twenty-three." Bow down, bow down, bow down. Chorus of undesirable citizens: We are the happy victims of a lately uttered preachment. Upon the testimony, we admit the soft impeachment, And, since we're undesirable and of but little worth, We work in mines in order that we may get off the earth. Chorus: For the worker must follow the job And the job must follow the flag, While the mighty hunter must follow the trail. And the head must follow the jag. Chorus of Liars: Dear Maria, you're a liar. So the story runs, Please retire under fire. So the story runs, I can't stand for your audacity, Coupled with unearned mendacity, I've a corner on veracity. So the story runs, singing you're a lie, you're a lie-O.

Mister Long, you're in the wrong. So the story runs, That is, you lie, to make it strong. So the story runs, Let me say it more explicitly, You're a fake of rank and duplicity, You can take my word implicitly. So the story runs, singing you're a lie, you're a lie-O. Carnegie—Peace be with you. That completes the witnesses, if the court please. What is the verdict? Foraker (announcing verdict)—The culprit is found guilty of Pernicious Activity and we sentence him to listen to the reading of his own messages. Roosevelt (awaking in time to hear the sentence)—They're lies (sings). (Curtain.)

THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN WAR

Being the Closing Speech of Clarence Darrow Before the Jury

Which Acquitted Haywood

(Continue From Yesterday.)

Afraid He Could Not "Git." Now what does he do after he is caught? Didn't he do just what he always did? Why didn't he get the bomb under Steunberger's bed at the Idaho hotel? What does he say? Not that. He thought it would blow up a lot of innocent people; oh, no, not that. He thought it would kill some women and some little noncombatant children. Ah, no, but he was afraid maybe he couldn't get away.

Are you going to take him? You better get him to Hawley; he would get away, and he was caught down at Caldwell, and the first thing he did was to try to get away. Tried to get away. Now, gentlemen, let us have a little more. How did he get away? How did Hawley get through with his argument. Suppose I was to go to this jury and try to demonstrate to you that Harry Orchard would kill a man for $50, would you believe it? You would think he would kill two for $50, wouldn't you? Now, gentlemen, would there be any doubt about it? Could there be one of you twelve men that would hesitate a moment to believe that I had persuaded you to do that? Harry Orchard would kill a man for $50?

Bribe for Haywood's Life. Now, suppose I come here and say to you that he would kill a man for his own head, and then what? Did he ever get as much for any act in his life as he is getting for this? Why, if you rolled together all the money that he ever claims to get from burning cheese factories and killing men and from the gambling table it would all sink into
