Our Paper in Danger of Suspension Unless Immediate and Redoubled Help Comes

THE DAILY WORKER, its plant and building in the hands of its creditors through court action, would mean a calamity for the Communist movement in the United States. That danger is staring the Daily Worker in the face.

The situation has come about because of the failure to raise quickly enough the support of the funds to save the DAILY WORKER. A working class paper, particularly a Communist paper, cannot be published without a deficit. Last year we made up our deficit for the DAILY WORKER thru raising a $30,000 "Insure The DAILY WORKER for 1925" fund. As a consequence of this magnificent support for the DAILY WORKER, the paper went thru until September without further appeals.

The situation which now exists is that obligations for paper, ink and material and labor in the printing plant have accumulated and must be paid. The DAILY WORKER must deal with capitalists who have the power to go into court to shut down the DAILY WORKER.

The Central Executive Committee of the party believes that it is the loyalty of the members of the party that will prevent such a calamity happening to our movement.

What is required is quick and generous support. The party members will raise the work of saving THE DAILY WORKER for our movement.

Within the next two weeks at least $10,000 in cash must come into the office of the party. Additional sums during the succeeding two weeks to make the total funds needed to save the DAILY WORKER. However, all that has been done to secure funds immediately will not help unless the party membership finishes the task by rushing immediate donations to the DAILY WORKER and raising the $10,000 needed during the next two weeks.

Other Party Papers Involved.

It is not only the life of THE DAILY WORKER which is involved in this crisis. It is also the life of the Workers Monthly and the Workers Department of the party. The printing plant and the home of the party and THE DAILY WORKER are involved. The DAILY WORKER plant publishes the papers of the Young Workers League, the South Slavic section, the Greek section, and the Polish section.

The regular appearance of all these papers is involved in the fight to save THE DAILY WORKER.

A Miracle of Militant Support Needed.

There is the latest strength in our movement which has never before been mobilized, who can save THE DAILY WORKER but must be mobilized now. The party can save THE DAILY WORKER if for the first time they are mobilized for the fight for the institution which is the heart of our movement.

Every branch secretary must immediately send in all the funds available.

Every circulation of THE DAILY WORKER coupon lists must send in the money collected.

Comrades and sympathizers who can make substantial loans for three months are urged to send in $100 in full payment of which 50 cents will be returned during the next two months.

Comrades, Monday's issue of THE DAILY WORKER must have at least a page filled with the names and donations of those comrades and sympathizers who have acted in answer to the call for immediate aid in order of saving THE DAILY WORKER for the Communist movement.

Until the catastrophe which faces THE DAILY WORKER is averted there is no other work of greater importance for the party than the work of raising the funds to save THE DAILY WORKER.

ARE WE THE FOES OF THE PROLETARIAT? THE STEELERS APPLIED TO LABOR BUT NOT TO CAPITAL.

The following article upon the possibility and significance of arbitration and what it means to the abstract strikers comes at a time when the Executive Committee is trying to force settlement without granting the workers demands by arbitration and mediation. This is the tenth of a series of articles by Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, whose efforts to speak to millions of miners are cut short by a jail sentence, from which he was recently released.

By ALEX REID
Secretary Progressive Miners' Committee.

The claim of saving the anthracite industry, from the menace of substitutes, according to the coal owners, necessitates the immediate resumption of operations, and this means in disputes left to the tender mercies of arbitrators.

The United Mine Workers have nothing to arbitrate. They are either correct in their demands, or incorrect. If they place their lives in jeopardy to produce the coal that warms our lives—500 of them per year—then they are right. It is who give their lives—500 of them per year—that they should be concerned.

Only one thing is certain: Arbitration? It is not only a question of wages, hours and working conditions that they are asked to arbitrate. It is life itself. The miners refuse to arbitrate their demands, not because they think their cause is unjust, but because they have had bitter experience with arbitrators before, which has always left them standing with the empty bag. The owners are asking them to do the only thing they have for sale—arbitration. They are asking them to arbitrate how many more men and women shall be asked to arbitrate how many more men and women shall be asked to arbitrate the life of the miner and the life of his children. This is a mine workers' point of view that no one proceeds for arbitration.

The truth is, the mine owners asked to arbitrate the kind of environment in which they will go to work, whether manhood and manhood, are asked to arbitrate the life of the miner and the life of his children. This is a mine workers' point of view that no one proceeds for arbitration.

taken refuge, in a last colony at Ludlow, Colo. The Rockefeller property was sold to John D. Rockefeller and strayed and burned the workers' homes.

Capital Don't Arbitrate
The workers are asked that Judge Gary, chairman of the board of trustees of the Rockefeller property, and member of President Wilson's industrial commission in 1915 also refused to arbitrate the steel strike when Wilson requested him to do so. Why? Because Gary, like Rockefeller will they were strong enough to break the workers' home break? That's for the time being—hey day.

The Delmore and Lackawanna railroad in the last strike of the railroad along the Pennsylvania line was the question, and in the railroad shops of that company, situated in the heart coal fields, are to be found harrowing conditions of which the workers have to learn. Arbitrate your life, hours and aspirations of your children—what kind man will arbitrate on substitutes wrapped up in the question of wages. In the question of environment, which is a great asset, is based on the wage, and living conditions as a result of the price for which labor is sold, is what arbitration means to the workers on coal.

Progressive Open Arbitration
The workers are asked to arbitrate how many more men and women shall be asked to arbitrate the life of the miner and the life of his children. This is a mine workers' point of view that no one proceeds for arbitration.

Only for Labor.
The mine owners are asked to arbitrate the life of the miner and the life of his children. This is a mine workers' point of view that no one proceeds for arbitration.

Instead the coal miners must make the union officials—their servants—do their bidding.

The Movement for World Trade Union Unity

For World Trade Union Unity

This is the fourth installment of a series of articles dealing with the question of World Trade Union Unity. This installment deals with the British Workers' Movement and its relations to the Russian Union and the American Federation of Labor and Unity.

At the meeting of the executive board of the Amsterdam International in June, 1924, the British representatives, led by Tom Bell and A. A. Purcell, president of the Amsterdam group for the opening up of negotiations with the Russian unions on the question of unifying the trade union movement. This was opposed by the delegates of the International. However, this proposal of the British representatives opened the road toward making the question of unifying the trade union movement an international affair. At that time the Russian delegates looked upon the Amsterdam International as being the logical unifying center, but they they stand along with Russian trade unions for a world congress to establish a single united trade union international.

In June, 1924, the Russian unions sent a delegation to the Hull meeting of the British Trade Union Congress, headed by Tom Bell, secretary of the Amsterdam International. This delegation raised the question of the creation of a united working class movement to meet the offensive of the capitalists and the dangers of new wars and factions of the trade unions.

In return the British Trades Union Congress sent a delegation to the sixth congress of the Russian trade unions in December, 1924. There the question of working for trade union unity in a program of unity was raised. The delegates of the Russian unions invited the British unions to join them in establishing an Anglo-Russian trade union committee for work for only one international body. The delegates of the British unions agreed that this was necessary and that they would recommend that the general council endorse the plan. This has been done and the Anglo-Russian union committee co-ordinates the efforts of the two strongest trade union movements in the world for trade union unity.

On its return from Russia the British delegation published its report, "Conditions of the Russian Trade Union Movement." This report has become famous throughout the world since that time. The reactionary leaders of Amsterdam and the capitalists and employers in this country have tried to read the report and vilified and every effort was made to prejudice the workers against the Russian Union. The delegates of the Russian Union, however, were not so easily deceived.

The following is the gist of the conclusion regarding Soviet Russia, arrived at by the British delegation. It explains why the capitalists are attacking the Russian Union.

A report on labor conditions in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics must begin by pointing out that in Russia the workers are the ruling class. For unless the reader bears this in mind throughout he will be misled by much of the propaganda which the general council has been spreading the same as with us. Really everything is quite different; because in Russia we have a regulation of the workers' movement, and they are not so easily deceived. Elsewhere we have a restriction of the workers' movement upon the part of the ruling class. They are the ruling class of Russia. They enjoy the rights of a ruling class. They are beginning to exercise its responsibilities. They are starting to take on the duties of a ruling class. In a village school visited by one of the delegates the children were learning to read and write. "Once we were slaves, now we are free."

United Congress also secured the support of the transport workers of continental Europe in refusing to ship coal to Britain in the event of a miners' strike.

The new coalition of the British ruling class understands that this swing to the left of the part of the workers meant a challenge to the capitalist system, as shown in the preparations being made to administer a crushing blow to the trade unions. The fascist movement is against organizing. Strikebreakers are being organized. The approval of the government in an organization named the Maintenance of Supplies. Cabinet ministers openly threatened the workers in the struggle against capitalism. The Communist Party and the National Minority Movement leaders are arrested charged with seditious propaganda, especially among the armed forces of the British trade union leadership was repudiated at the Scarborough Trades Union Congress, and the left wing leaders are to work with the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Unity Committee. In the question, Daily Herald a discussion raged for some weeks on the labor party is still committed to MacDonald & Co. But the masses of the trade unionists are following the left wing—the battles being fought between the left and right wings inside the movement today are preparatory steps towards an effective challenge of British capitalism.

The new coalition of the British trade union movement was given concrete expression at the Scarborough Trades Union Congress held in October, 1925. The following constitutes the program of the British trade unions according to the decisions of that congress:

1. That capitalism can no longer function in the interests of the working class and must be replaced by a system of society based upon the socialization of the means of wealth production, and the more democratic forms of capitalism are necessary; therefore it is necessary to organize shop committees to mobilize the workers for the fight against capitalist exploitation.

2. The unions of the general council regarding international trade union unity were endorsed, and the council instructed to continue to work with the Anglo-Russian Trade Union Unity Committee.

3. Indefinitely broke with British imperialism and declared that the British empire was based upon exploitation of millions of colonial slaves, that it was the duty of the unions to aid in the destruction of this slave empire, and that the Trades Union Congress must help the colonial workers to organize themselves in trade unions and political parties for the fight against British imperialism.

This program, in conjunction with the growing class consciousness of the trade unionists as shown by the growth of the Minority Movement, has laid the basis for the revival of the British trade union movement. That movement has always been the most conservative in its attitude towards the working world. So conservative was it that the great deeds of the founders of the first trade unions at the beginning of the last century, and the heroic deeds of the strikers between 1830 and 1849 were forgotten. But the misery brought upon the British workers by capitalist exploitation has forced them forward as a matter of self-preservation. The British workers will prove in the future that they are able to perform even greater deeds than the heroic deeds of the founders of the first trade unions.

The movement for world trade union unity having for its basis the 11,000,000 trade unionists of Britain and Russia, presents a far more force in the working class movement today. The opposition of the reactionary Amsterdam leaders, encouraged and aided by the capitalist class, is being met by the workers, not as it will be swept aside, by the sheer necessity of the workers to defend themselves against the coolie standard of living forced upon them by capitalist exploitation.

The London Daily Worker (Feb. 28, 1925) under the headline, "Trade Unionists Who Were hoodwinked," said of the report: "It is a naive document, and where it is not naive it is misleading."

The following headlines appeared in the London capitalist press regarding the report: Daily Mail: "Eyesash; For Blind Leaders"; Daily Express: "Lash on Soviet Whitesash"; Daily Express: "Red Whitesash."

The revolutionary wing of the trade union movement organized in the National Minority Movement, led by such staunch revolutionary fighters as Harry Pollitt of the Holmermakers' Union and Tom D'Alton, has grown to great proportions. In February, 1925, the conference of the National Minority Movement, had present over six hundred delegates representing over six hundred thousand trade unionists. This is no fake membership because the membership of the Minority Movement is on dues payment, both individual and collective. This movement has as its basic the program of the workers' movement, and it is the only movement of great masses of British trade unionists to their revolutionary program.

The capitalist attack on the wages of the British miners produced a wonderful exhibition of solidarity in the formation of the National Minority Movement, railwaymen and coal miners, transport workers, backed by the Trades Union Congress, the Trades
