

Anti-Socialist "Winnie."

Winston Churchill may be a political twister but he can see more clearly the trend of events than many of his colleagues. He realises what so many Labour leaders, political and industrial, either do not see or are not honest enough to declare, that the great fight between organised capital and organised labour must come, and in the not far distant future. He aspires to lead the army of capitalism, and there are indications that although at the moment under a cloud owing to the fact that the tactics of capitalism is to fawn on and flatter "safe" Labour leaders of the Snowdon-Thomas-MacDonald type, his time is coming.

He aspires to be the Mussolini of Britain, and if he gets his chance the yellow labourites who prate of goodwill to the interest of the whole community and deny the essential class antagonisms of capitalist society will get a rude shock.

"Winnie" has no illusions: Socialism must be destroyed or he and his class must go.

The class-conscious worker agrees with him, but will see to it that the Socialist movement, in spite of Labour Fakirs, fools and traitors of all kinds, does not retire from the contest.

the real destroyer of national and all real human self-respect.

Yet in spite of all these culpable failings, class-conscious workers will vote for the Pact because the fall of the Smuts Government is an essential stage in the fall of capitalist government throughout the world, a natural step along the most probable and practicable line of emancipation for mankind, something that should be assisted even by those voters (like the native voters for instance) who think they see in a Nationalist-Labour Government a scorpion compared with the S.A.P. whip. To these we say: it is not enough to sigh for land and liberty: to get them we must grasp clearly what stands in our way, and when we find the snag is the entire world-wide capitalist exploitation machine (including the British "Throne and Empire"), then we must put off childish things, "loyalties" and superstitions, we must cease to look to capitalist governments for "protection" and aim only at weakening them all, and we must use all available weapons at hand, no matter how intrinsically reactionary, to achieve our purpose, confident that they in turn will soon be superseded by better ones. Thus we shall approximate ever nearer to the clear-cut "workers' and peasants" movement both at home and abroad.

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

We support the Pact on this occasion just because experience has shown and is showing us more clearly every day that ONE BANNER ALONE CAN LEAD THE WORKERS TO UNITY AND VICTORY, THE BANNER OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY.
